Tim Hudak Appoints Jane McKenna as Ontario PC Children and Youth Services Critic

QUEEN'S PARK — Ontario PC Leader Tim Hudak has appointed Jane McKenna, MPP for Burlington, as the Ontario PC Critic for Children and Youth Services – a valuable role on an Ontario PC team that is focused on bringing forward new ideas to a tired government.

Burlington families have entrusted MPP Jane McKenna, Ontario PC leader Tim Hudak, and their colleagues to keep Dalton McGuinty on a short leash, and to change the direction Ontario is headed in. Jane McKenna said she was humbled by the appointment, and eager to get to work to deliver the change families have asked for after eight years of Dalton McGuinty.

While Dalton McGuinty chose the same ministers for his Cabinet that drove up government spending, doubled Ontario's debt and increased the deficit at a time when other economies are reducing them – Tim Hudak and the Ontario PC Cabinet will focus like a laser on new initiatives and new ideas to once again make Ontario the economic leader in Canada.

QUOTES:

"I'm honoured to be named critic for Children & Youth Services, a position that will allow me to champion Ontarians' priorities and defend the best interests of future generations. I look forward to working together with my Caucus colleagues to hold the McGuinty Liberals' feet to the fire, bring runaway government spending under control and deliver the honest results that matter most to our communities."

--Jane McKenna, MPP for Burlington

"Families want a change in direction to create jobs and rein in government spending before it is too late. With Jane McKenna as our next Critic for Children and Youth Services, Ontario families know they'll have an Opposition Critic ready and able to hold Dalton McGuinty to account, and get government focused on what matters most – job creation and responsible spending."

--Tim Hudak, Ontario PC Leader
